Online games unblocked 77

If they call me once again by someone I don't even know... Well, I don't have a decent threat. What can you do? Online multiplayer is great, when enjoyed with friends. When your friends aren't online, when you're up all night because of insomnia and want to play Quake Live or Left 4 Dead or anything on Xbox Live at 4am, when you have to play with a lot of strangers, life can really start to suck. Prepare to be randomly abused, verbally for no real reason. Get ready to hear swear words spat out in clumsy, teenage voices. Even if you don't use voip, be prepared to see hastily typed, or worse, macro recorded insults hurled at you as fast as immature fingers can produce them. Something about perceived anonymity brings out the worst in some people. I don't want to classify teenyboppers, because I've met some very nice 12-year-olds, but they seem to be the worst of the lot, at least according to my certainly unserifc survey. It's about counting how many times the voices — calling me a very, very nasty word — crack as they cast curses. I don't charge virtually everyone who plays online through matchmakers like GameSpy Arcade, Steam, built-in server browsers, or anything else. I made good friends online through random matches. But I'm about to stop playing online with strangers quite soon because I'm sick of abuse, which quickly cancels out the fun. As fast as losers are banned, they open new accounts and join. As often as the ESRB evaluates M games, the children have got their hands on them anyway. Why do they feel the urge to sling mud to everyone they meet online? Is this just bad nature? Bad parenting? A societal failure? The worst of them respond to everything with a compound word that starts with M, has an F in it, and ends up in the ER, even if you try to reason with them. You can't reason with a four-year-old, and that's pretty much the mentality of the morons who ruin the correspondences for those of us who act our age. Continued...
